DATED: 17th MARCH, 2006.

P.C.

. Heard. Though the application has been filed seeking order in the nature of direction for maintenance of status quo ante, taking over of possession of the premises by the respondent, the learned advocate for the applicant has stated that at the moment he is seeking limited relief in the nature of direction to the respondent to allow the applicant to take away the books and study materials of the applicant's son by name Parvin from the suit premises as his son is appearing for the examination from 20th March, 2006. The respondents, therefore, in the facts and circumstances of the case are directecd to allow the applicant to take away the books and study materials of the said Parvin from the suit premises. The necessary facility in that regard should be afforded to the applicant by the respondent forthwith. The applicant, however, shall not be entitled to take away any article other than the books and the study materials of the said Parvin from the suit premises.

2. Whatever materials to be taken out from the suit premises, proper panchanama in that regard should be drawn and the same should be placed on record in the Civil Application No.1468 of 2006. The present application accordingly stands disposed of.
